Simon Travis

Simon Travis is the Professor of Clinical Gastroenterology at the University of Oxford. He currently works at the world renowned Kennedy Institute and the Translational Gastroenterology Unit on inflammation across tissues. He qualified from St Thomas' Hospital London in 1981 and trained in gastroenterology both in London and in Oxford. He was awarded his Doctor of Philosophy on colonic epithelial response to inflammatory mediators from the University of Oxford in 1992. He was appointed Consultant Physician in Plymouth (1994) and then returned to Oxford (2001) as a Consultant Gastroenterologist where he led the IBD service (2005-2022). He was a Member of Council of the British Society of Gastroenterology (2004-2007) and Chair of the scientific committee of ECCO (2007-2010) before becoming President of the European Crohn's and Colitis Organisation (ECCO, 2012-2014). He has received many awards from around the world and subsequently led the IBD initiative of the International Consortium of Health Outcome Measures (ICHOM). He retired from the NHS, although not from research or clinical practice, in 2022. Professor Travis' research interests focus on novel therapies for IBD, endoscopic assessment, and clinical prediction. He is the author of 7 books, 30 chapters, >300 papers and 25 international guidelines, with an h-index of 76.
